Blue Cheese Potato Salad

-----Mix together-----
2 bunches green onions -- washed and chopped
5 stalks celery -- chopped
1/2 cup fresh dill -- chopped
1 cup mayonnaise
1 cup sour cream
2 teaspoons lemon juice
Salt and pepper to taste
---Add about-----
1/2 cup crumbled blue cheese -- to 3/4, and mix well

Let mixture sit overnight (very important), as the blue cheese needs to blend with the dressing. Then, toss dressing with about 5 pounds of cooked, cut potatoes, more salt, and a little vinegar. I use small red potatoes, and then cut them into quarters or sixths if they are larger. I cut them first and then cook them, just until they are done, and then rinse them in cold water to stop cooking. Then I usually toss them with a little vinegar and salt - remember, potatoes SOAK up salt.

Chinese Noodle Salad w/ Roasted Eggplant

		The Noodles & The Marinade
7	tablespoons	low sodium soy sauce
3	tablespoons	balsamic vinegar
3	tablespoons	sugar -- or more to taste
2 1/2	teaspoons	red pepper oil
8	each	scallions -- mostly white part, -- thinly sliced
3	tablespoons	cilantro -- chopped
14	ounces	Chinese noodles =20
		The Eggplant & The Vegetable Garnish
1	pound	Japanese eggplant
1	tablespoon	ginger root -- 1 1/2 oz. peeled & -- minced
1	clove	garlic -- finely chopped
		Reserved Marinade, from above
4	ounces	snow peas -- strings removed, cut -- in narrow strips
1/2	pound	mung bean sprouts
3	tablespoons	sesame seeds
1	each	carrot -- medium size, cut in -- jullienne
		Cilantro leaves -- for garnish

Begin by making the marinade. Combine all the ingredients (except the noodles) in a bowl, stir them together until the sugar is dissolved. Next, bring a large pot of water to a boil for the noodles. While it is heating, gently pull apart the strands of noodles with your fingers, loosening and fluffing them as you do so. Add the noodles to the boiling water without any salt, and give them a quick stir with a fork or a pair of chopsticks. Cook briefly until they are done but not overly soft, a few minutes at most. Immediately pour them into a colander and rinse them in cold water to stop the cooking. Shake the colander vigorously to get rid of as much water as possible, and put the noodles into a bowl. Stir the marinade again; then pour half of it over the noodles and toss them with your hands to distribute the marinade. Set the remaining marinade aside. If the noodles aren't to be used for a while, cover them with plastic and refrigerate them. The flavors, as well as the heat in the red pepper oil, will develop as the noodles sit.

Preheat the oven to 400=B0F. Pierce the eggplants in several places and bake them until they are soft and their skins have shriveled, about 20 minutes, depending on their size. Turn them over after 10 minutes so they will bake evenly. When the eggplants are done, remove them to a cutting board and slice them in half lengthwise. When they are cool enough to handle, peel the skin away from the flesh. Don't worry about any small pieces of skin that are difficult to remove - the flecks of dark purple - brown are pretty. Shred the eggplants, gently tearing them into 1/4 - inch strips. Add the ginger and garlic to the reserved marinade, then the eggplant strips. Turn the pieces over several times to make sure all the surfaces are well coated, and set them aside. Bring a quart of water to a boil with a teaspoon of salt. Blanch the snow peas until they are bright green; then remove them with a strainer and rinse them in cool water. Cut them into long, narrow strips and set them aside.

Next, put the sprouts in the water and cook them for about 30 seconds.

Pour them into a colander, rinse them with cold water, and lay them on a clean kitchen towel to dry. Roast the sesame seeds in a pan until they are lightly colored and smell toasty.

If the noodles have been refrigerated, allow them to come to room temperature; then toss them with the eggplant strips and half the sesame seeds. Mound them on a platter, distribute the carrots, snow peas, and mung bean sprouts over the noodles, and garnish with the remaining sesame seeds and the leafy branches of cilantro.

Present the salad like this, layered and laced with the colorful garnishes, either on a single large platter or on individual plates. Once served, guests can toss the noodles and vegetables together to thoroughly mingle the different colors, textures, and tastes.

David Vano's Caesar Salad

Start with a medium head of romaine lettuce. Holding head firmly, cut 1/2" off bottom and then cut entire head in 1" slices. Put in cold water. Let sit while preparing dressing. In a very large wooden bowl add the following: 3" strip of anchovies paste; 1 coddled egg (a must); the juice of 1/2 lemon; 4 T balsamic vinegar ; 5 T olive oil (I do not use extra virgin because it does not have the taste; the less expensive, more pressed olive oil is my choice); 1-2 cloves of garlic pressed; 1/2 t seasoned salt; 1 T Lea and Perrin; Tobasco to taste, 4-5 drops; 2-3 T parmesan cheese fresh grated (never out of a box); your favorite croutons. Start with the garlic and anchovy paste. Mix in bowl with all liquids; add remaining ingredients; put in croutons to let sit in liquid for a few seconds. Thoroughly dry lettuce (use spinner if you have one) and put in bowl. Toss until all lettuce is coated. Add fresh ground pepper (I like a lot) and a few more croutons. Serve immediately. Offer more pepper.

Please note that you cannot make this ahead; it will be no good in 1-2 hours. Also, if you do not eat all salad throw out remaining. Romaine lettuce gets very bitter and cannot be left over.

A colorful array of greenery tossed with a savory balsamic vinaigrette. Whenever nectarines are available, especially during the summer season, I slice up 2 of the succulent fruits and add them to the salad. They lend a delightfully refreshing touch. This recipe won 1st prize in a salad contest run by a Boston area newspaper.

1. Choose at least three of the varied salad greens - I usually select Boston and red leaf as my base and add two other types for their color and flavor.
2. Wash the greens, pat dry, and pile them into a large salad bowl. Adorn the greenery with the fruit and toasted walnuts.
3. Beat together the oil, vinegar, orange juice, mustard, garlic, salt, and pepper in a bowl.
4. Pour the dressing over the greenery and toss well to coat evenly. Present at once.

New Potato Salad

A local restaurant serves a simple, but elegant, potato salad as part of their Sunday Brunch menu.

Add salt and pepper to taste. You may also want to add more lemon juice or Dijon mustard at this point, as this produces a fairly bland dressing. Slice potatoes (leave skins on) about 1/4 inch thick. Place in a large bowl and fold in the dressing. Serve chilled. Best made the day before so the flavors have a chance to mingle.

2	tablespoons	Orange rind -- grated
2	tablespoons	Honey

 I used peanut oil and minced green onions when I made this. I served it on a salad of Boston lettuce with melon and chopped prosciutto. Slightly toast the poppy seeds (method below). Place all ingredients in a screw-top jar. Shake vigorously. Chill until serving. This dressing complements any green salad, but the addition of some small chunks of cantelope, honeydew, or star fruit to your greens will enhance the orange-honey flavor of the dressing. Or try it over slices of cold roast pork with nectarine wedges on watercress. Poppy Seeds: Did you know that it takes almost a million seeds to make a pound? These tiny bluish-black gems come from the opium poppy plant. But even if you eat a million, you won't experience any narcotic effect. Connoisseurs say those imported from Holland taste best. For even better flavor, seeds should be slightly toasted in a 350 degree oven for about 5 minutes.
